Catherine Tone is a sustainable color professional, artist, photographer and designer who lives in the mountains of Colorado near Nederland. Born and raised in the Midwest, she enjoyed many family ski trips to Colorado, as well as traveling around the US and abroad. She studied art from a very young age, and received an Interior Design degree from Iowa State University where she won a competition for her chair design. In addition, she has lived and studied art and design in Florence, Italy.

The "Snowy Fox" wildlife painting is inspired by the "Leave No Trace" principles. Catherine's work is intended to bring awareness to, and help preserve, the natural world. She especially enjoys capturing the color and magnificence of the wild side of Colorado. The "Snowy Fox" original painting is currently available.

As a color consultant, Catherine's inspiration for color concepts and palettes are derived from nature and places she has photographed, hiked and traveled. She would be thrilled to help you create an inspiring color palette for your home or business.

Current exhibits are posted at: www.ctonedesigns.com

Prints of the "Snowy Fox", and other works by Catherine Tone, are always available.For further information, please visit her Facebook pages or contact:

What is local love? You're doing it by reading the Mountain Pages, using local services, and spreading the word to other locals about the great experiences you've had in your mountain community! Shops may cost a little more outside the city and the food may not be as fast; but they always greet you with a smile and there's love in every gesture. Peaceful people supporting each other. Whether it's seeing a neighborhood pickin' session or donating time to the community garden, you are helping everyone around you strengthen and grow together! Let's make our mountains a shining example of community caring.

Local love for life!
